

The spring by the ash-tree: the archaeology of Ashwell part 3

Keith J Fitzpatrick-Matthews
NHDC Archaeology Officer

Ashwell

- ◆ Occupies a northward ‘projection’ of Hertfordshire
 - Together with Bygrave, Hinxworth, Newnham, Caldecote and Radwell
- ◆ A distinctive character
 - The ‘Hinxworth lowlands’ west of the village
 - Outcrops of Totternhoe stone
 - The ‘Steeple Morden area’ village centre and to the north
 - Chalk marl soils
 - The ‘North Baldock chalk uplands’ south of Ashwell
 - Claybush Hill is the highest point in the parish

Prehistory

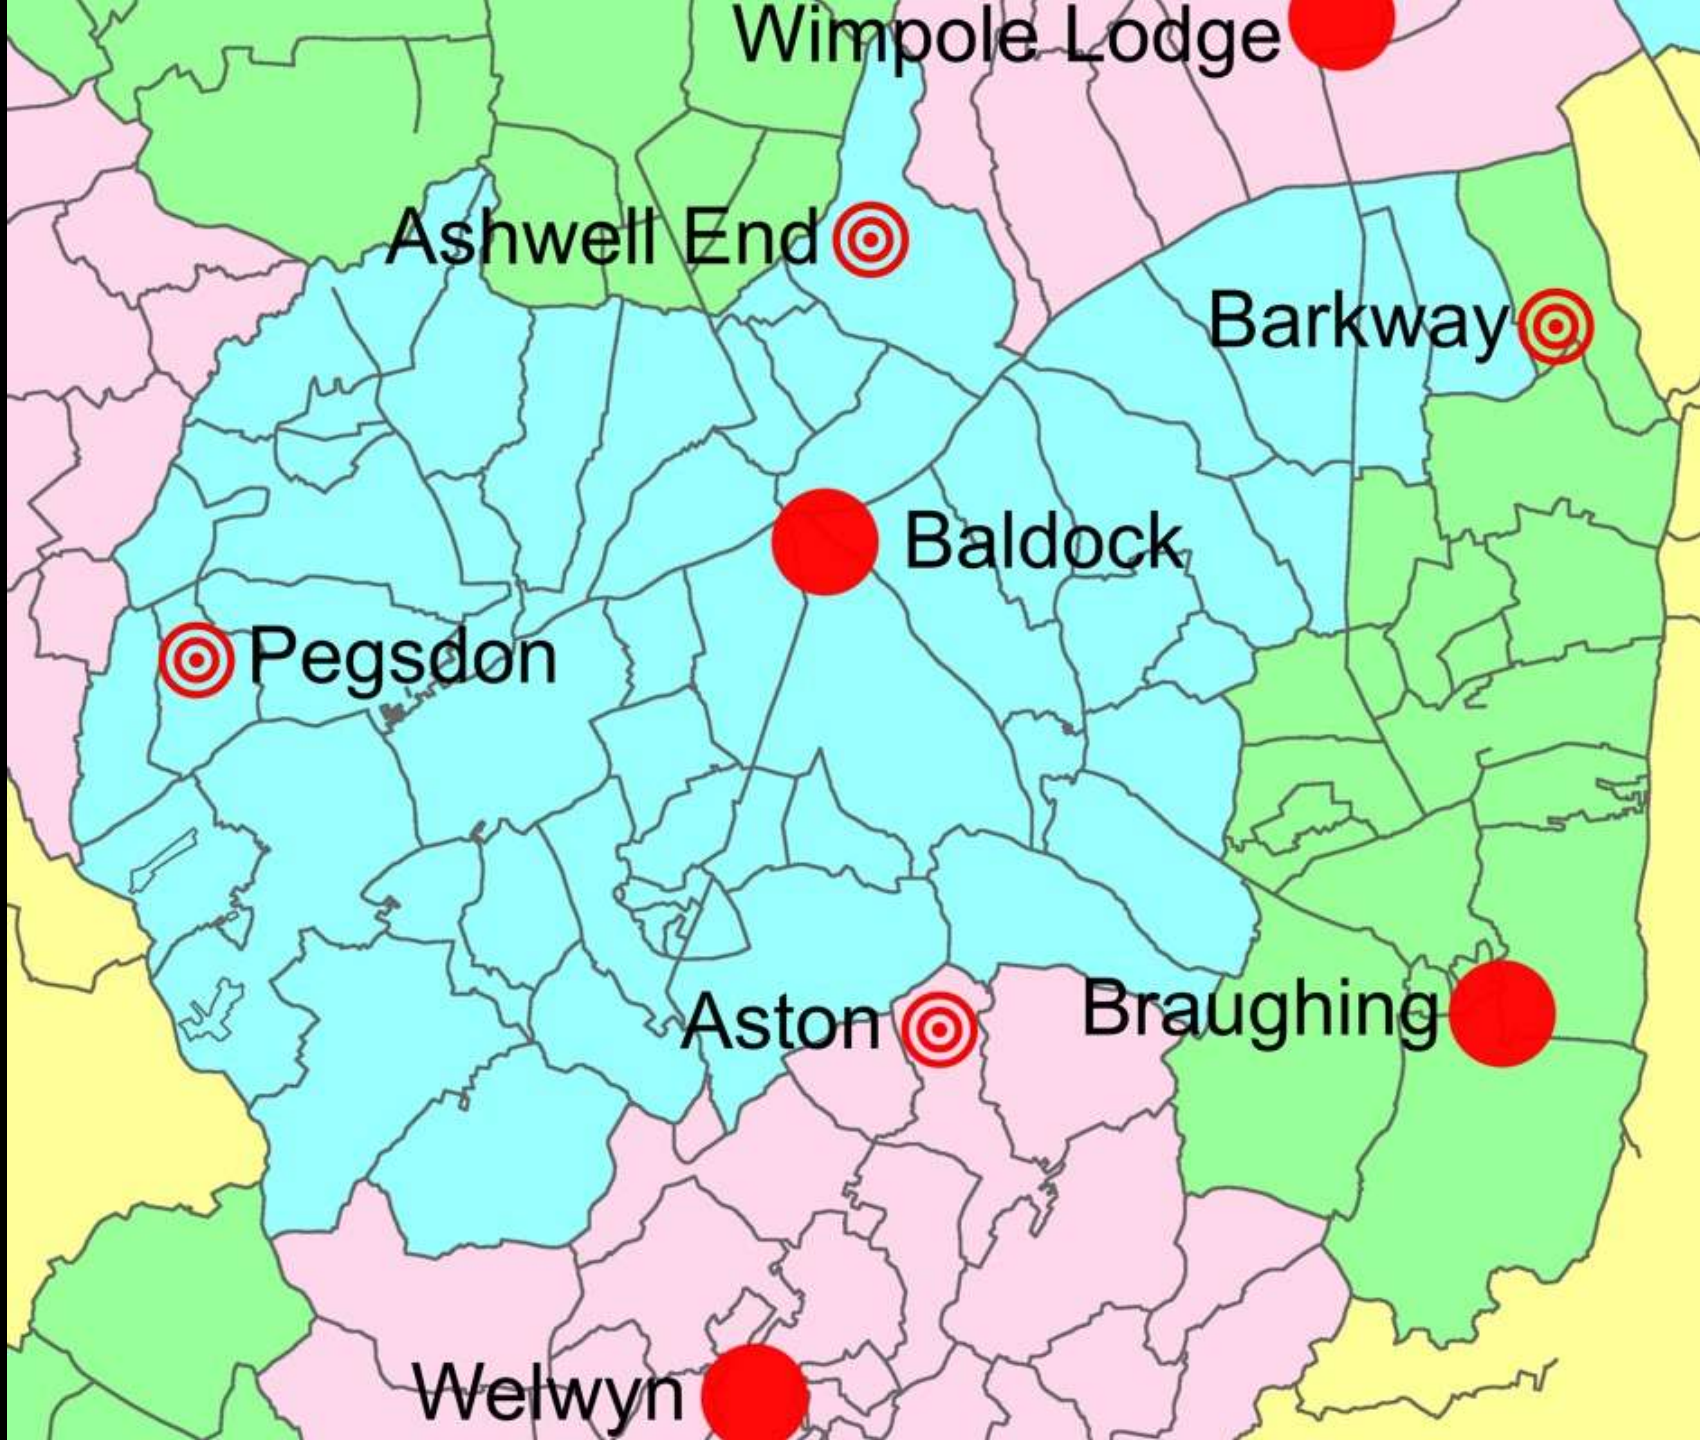

- ◆ Rich and diverse prehistory
 - Neolithic long barrows
 - Bronze Age round barrows
- ◆ In the Iron Age, Ashwell lay in the territory of Arbury Banks
 - Oval enclosure on a plateau
 - Middle and Late Iron Age date (c 400 BC-AD 43)
 - But not really very defensible
 - Similar to Wilbury, on the edge of Letchworth
- ◆ Part of the territory of Baldock by the second century BC
 - A developing town

The Roman period

- ◆ Baldock was the dominant settlement locally
 - A 'small town' with its own council
 - And a prosperous hinterland
 - Numerous large villas
- ◆ Gil Burleigh has suggested that its boundaries are marked by religious sites
 - The shrine of Senuna at Ashwell End
 - The shrine of Mars Alator at Barkway
 - A complex at Pegsdon
 - A temple at Aston
 - This is curiously like modern North Hertfordshire!

After the Romans

- ◆ A period for which there is little evidence
 - Although there is more over the county boundary
 - Does this mean the boundary is ancient?
- ◆ There is a late sixth-century jar from the spring area
 - Of Anglo-Saxon type
- ◆ And some metalwork has been found by detectorists
 - But we know nothing about its context
 - It includes a Viking-era sword chape

The origins of the settlement

- ◆ Ashwell is an Old English name
 - Æscewelle means 'Ash-tree spring'
 - It's an undatable type of placename
 - So we can't use it to suggest the origin of the village
- ◆ Ashwell is first mentioned in the Will of Æpelgifu, c 990
 - Who bequeathed 20 sheep
 - Probably to a minster church
 - This makes Ashwell an important centre

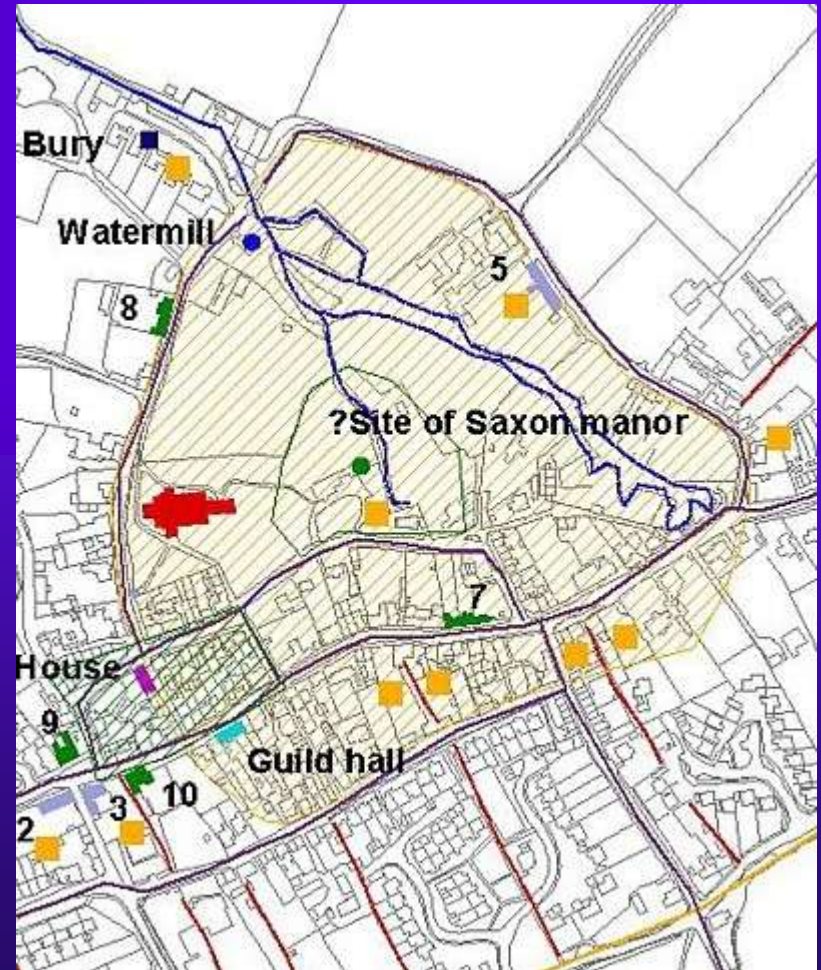

A minster church

- ◆ Early churches with responsibility over a wide area
 - A priest is mentioned in Domesday Book
 - Often, there are two in each Hundred
 - Ashwell probably included Hinxworth, Radwell, Newnham, Caldecote and Bygrave
- ◆ Nothing remains to be seen of the early church
 - This is not unusual
 - Great rebuilding following the Norman Conquest

The early town

- ◆ Minsters were often the focus for developing towns
 - Often in their own defended enclosures
 - There may be traces of it in Ashwell
- ◆ The focal point of the local road system
 - Between two major Roman roads
 - Which continued in use
 - A good site for a market

Domesday Book

- ◆ A list of places
 - Organised by feudal overlords
 - With details of population etc.
- ◆ It's actually a tax list
 - So the king can work out how much Danegeld he can raise
 - So it only mentions taxable people
- ◆ Ashwell had 14 burgesses
 - Which tells us about the status of the town
 - It is divided between four tenants
 - The Abbot of Westminster, Geoffrey of Mandeville, Peter of Valognes and Hardwin of Scales

The Domesday tenants

- ◆ The Abbot of Westminster clearly had the town centre
 - He also held Kelshall
- ◆ Geoffrey of Mandeville sublet to Germund
 - Who also held the lost Hainstone
 - Which may have been in the northern part of the parish
- ◆ Peter of Valognes also held land in Hinxworth
 - Which suggests that his part lay around Ashwell End/Bluegates
- ◆ Hardwin of Scales sublet to Theobald
 - Who also held land in Wallington, Hinxworth and other places
- ◆ A complexity of tenants and manors suggests complex history

Why burgesses?

- ◆ Burgesses mean it was a burh
 - Which makes it a specific type of town
 - A market town
 - A defended town
 - An administrative centre
- ◆ And it's not the only one locally
 - Hitchin had a burghal ditch
 - Probably part of Edward the Elder's reconquest of Mercia
 - Accomplished by establishing defended towns
 - Usually on existing town sties

Ashwell's burh

- ◆ Where were the defences?
 - Like Hitchin, nothing remains
 - It's the same at Hertford
 - And they are unlikely to have followed the earlier enclosure
- ◆ But we may be able to work out where they were
 - Town plan analysis
 - Looking at the layout of roads and boundaries
 - We know that the market and church must be inside
- ◆ Two basic options
 - Minimal and larger

The manors

- ◆ There were several manors
 - Ashwell
 - The manor of the Abbot of Westminster
 - Digswell
 - Appears to have been the manor held by Peter de Valognes
 - Westbury
 - The manor of Hardwin of Scales
 - West of the burh
 - Westbury Nernewtes appears to be a part of it
 - Kirbys
 - Situated in the north of the parish
 - Staines or Wafries
 - First mentioned in 1567
 - Sonwell and Otways
 - Always mentioned together
 - Sunings
 - Only found once, in 1585

The market

- ◆ In 1295, the Abbot of Westminster claimed the right
 - By virtue of the Charter of Edward the Confessor
 - First documented in 1211
 - Renewed by Elizabeth I in 1575
 - Lapsed by 1792
 - But a small market continued until at least 1855
- ◆ Market place traditionally between High Street, Gardiners Lane, Swan Street and Church Lane
 - Probably considerably bigger
 - Appears to have extended to Hodwell
 - The livestock market close to the springs

The fair

- ◆ Claimed by the Abbot in 1295
 - Referring to a grant of Henry III
 - It does not survive
- ◆ Elizabeth I renewed the grant
 - And extended it to three separate fairs
 - Abolished by law in 1872

The medieval church

- ◆ Surviving structure
 - Almost entirely fourteenth-century
 - Completed in 1381
 - The most impressive tower in the county
 - Evidence for the wealth of the town
- ◆ Well known for the graffiti in the tower
 - Accounts of the Black Death
 - Outbreaks of 1349 and 1361
 - Drawing of the East end of St Paul's Cathedral in London

The Guild of St John the Baptist

- ◆ Founded in 1476
 - A popular time for the foundation of religious Guilds
 - Possibly involved in the government of the town
- ◆ Brotherhood Hall stood in High Street
 - 57-61 High Street
 - Built before 1500
 - Altered in 16th and 17th centuries
- ◆ Typical of a guild house in decayed towns and large villages
 - Shows that the status of the town had gone
 - But that it still retained some urban pretensions

DAYS

Westbury

- ◆ One of the medieval manors
 - Held by the Abbess of Holywell (Middlesex) in the twelfth century
- ◆ The site of a medieval moat
 - Two separate moated areas
 - A third possible enclosure identified to the east in 1997
 - Excavated by Mrs D G Hurst in 1957
 - Found a complex of 12th-13th century timber buildings

Love Lane

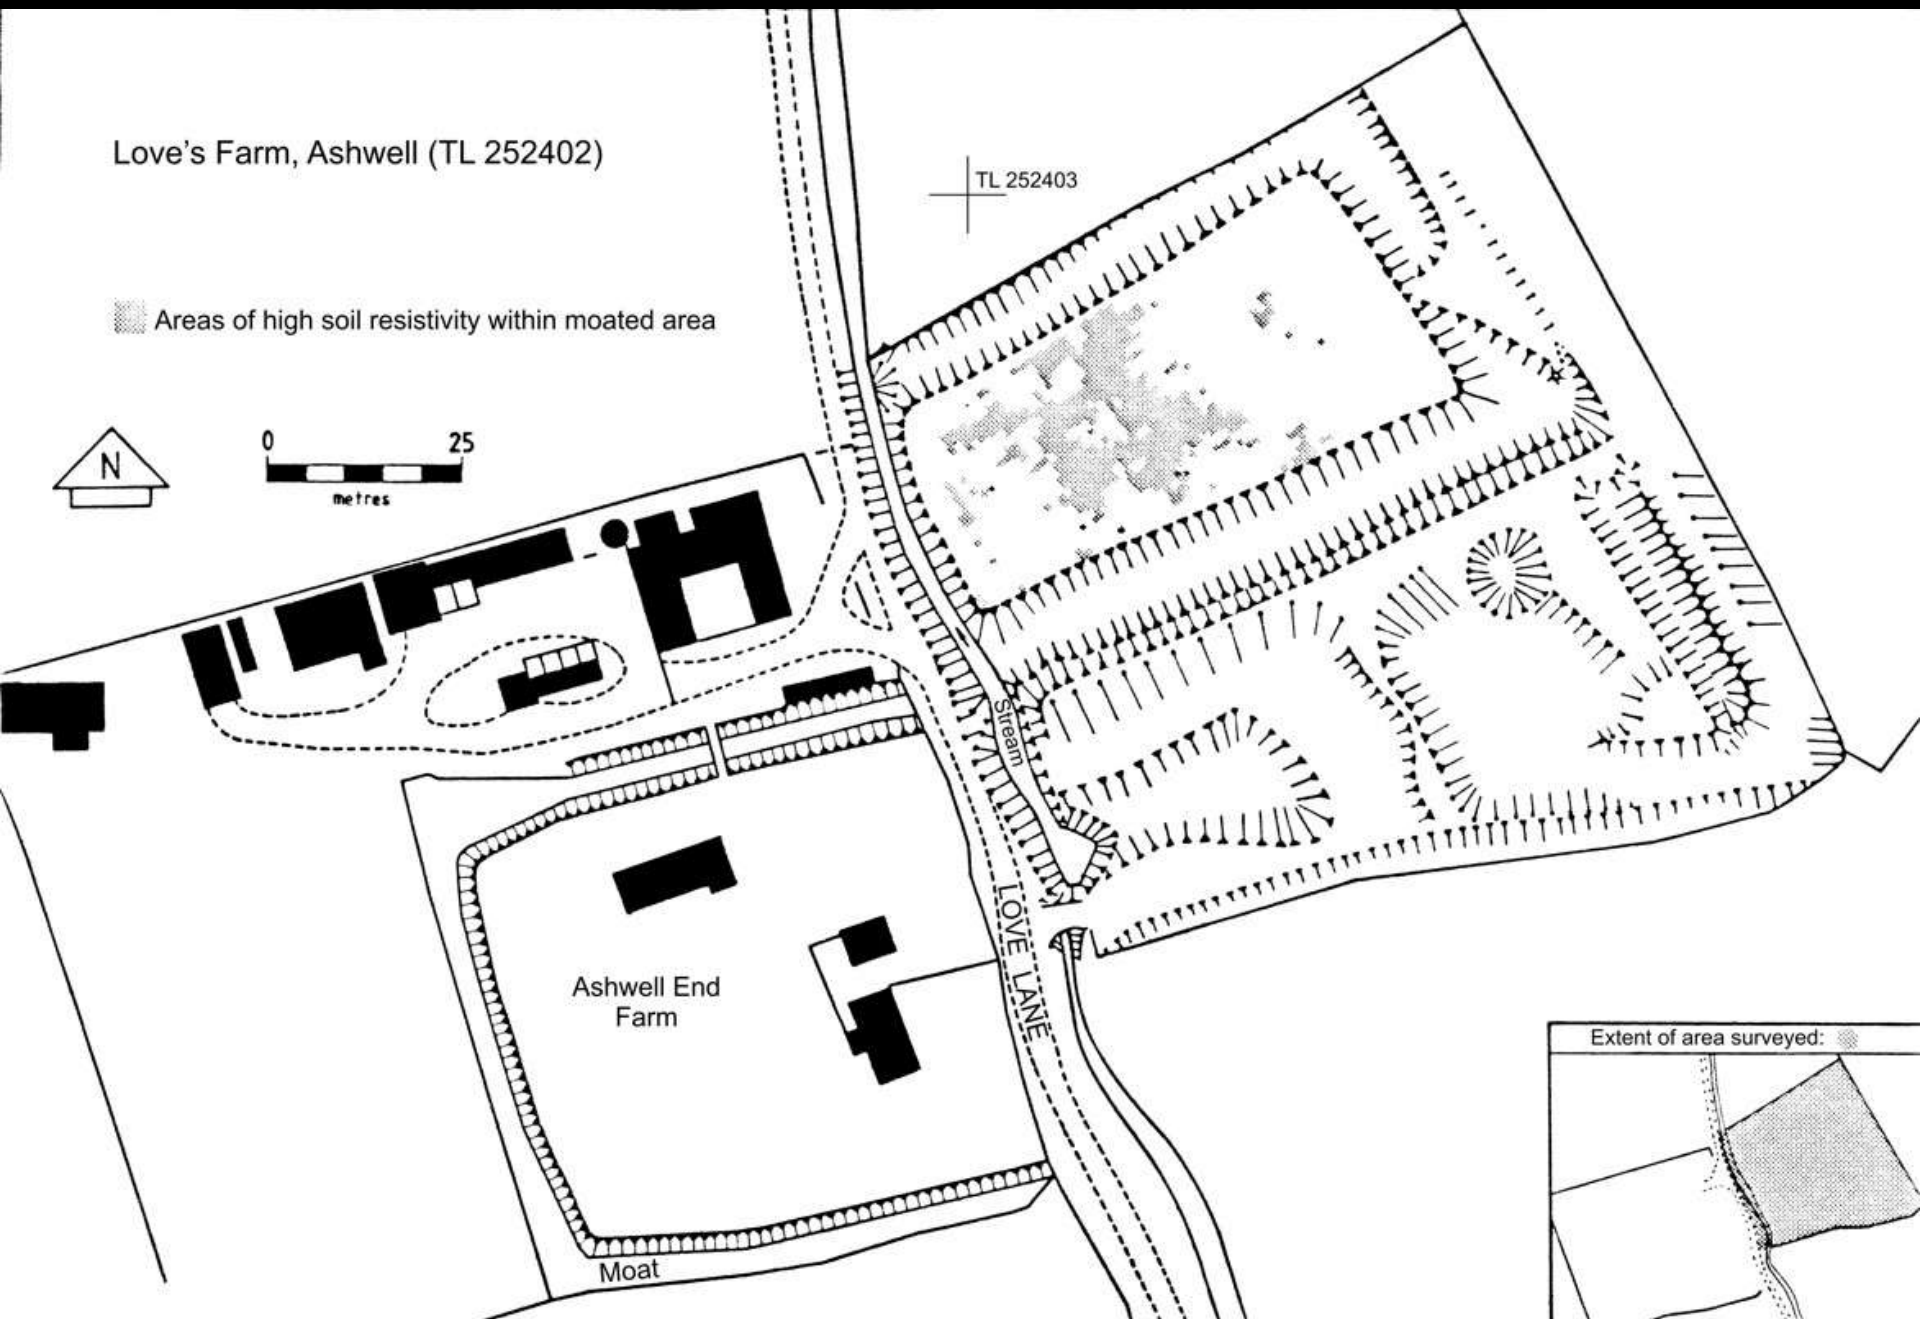

- ◆ Another moated complex
 - Partly surveyed by North Herts Museums in 1986/7
- ◆ Two or three moats
 - One still has buildings on it
 - The second lies to the north
 - On the opposite side of the road
 - Said to be the site of a demolished chapel
 - A third enclosure lies opposite the first
 - South of the second
 - Unclear if it really was a moat
- ◆ The site of Glitton?
 - First recorded in 1313
 - No maps show it

Extent of area surveyed:

Other moated sites

- ◆ Several other moated sites are known
 - Mob's Hole
 - Name first recorded 1782
 - Ashwell End
 - Filled in c 1970
 - South of Bluegates
 - Filled in
 - Possible site on Hinxworth road
 - Visible as a dubious cropmark

Mills

- ◆ Domesday Book records two mills
 - A town mill on Mill Street
 - Name first recorded 1200
 - Mill House was 17th century (partly collapsed 1960)
 - The second may have been north of Bluegates Farm
 - Called Howlet's Mill in 1766

The open fields

- ◆ Four principal fields recorded
 - North Field
 - All of the northern part of the parish
 - Quarry Field
 - West of the town
 - Claybush Field
 - South of the town
 - Redland Field
 - South-east of the town
 - Noted for barley
- ◆ Sheep pasture on the hills
 - A major source of wealth
 - Especially after the decline of the market

Pillow mounds

- ◆ Numerous mounds on the hills south of the village
 - Low, rectangular mounds
 - Used in the breeding of rabbits
 - A source of meat
 - Also for sale at the market

The hamlets

- ◆ Known as 'Ends'
 - Ashwell End
 - To the north-west of the town
 - Ruddery (Redreth) End
 - Where Ashwell Street crosses the county boundary
 - First documented c 1100
 - Had its own chapel until the 16th century
 - Slip End
 - At the southern tip of the parish

Buildings

- ◆ A number of late medieval buildings survive
 - Despite the Great Fire of 1850
- ◆ Fifteenth- and sixteenth-century buildings
 - Mostly along the High Street and West End
 - Many were paid for by wealth derived from wool

The Town House

- ◆ Believed to be the first bit of infill in the Market Place
 - Built as a Tithe House by the Abbot of Westminster
 - Dates from c 1500
- ◆ Built as a one-up, one-down structure
 - A purpose-built shop
 - The ground floor had unglazed windows
 - The third bay was added in the seventeenth century
 - When it belonged to St John's College, Cambridge
- ◆ Restored in 1930
 - To become the village museum

The Rose and Crown

- ◆ A late fifteenth-century hall house
 - Central hall open to the rafters
 - Service wing to the left (west)
- ◆ Evidence for piecemeal rebuilding
 - Including a late seventeenth-century inglenook
 - Added at the same time as upper floor inserted in hall

So what went wrong?

- ◆ In 1066, Ashwell was ideally placed to prosper
 - And it continued to prosper for centuries
 - But the market eventually declined and vanished
- ◆ Commercial rivalries
 - Baldock, Biggleswade, Bassingbourn and Royston
- ◆ Changing communications
 - Icknield Way between Baldock and Royston
 - The decline of Ashwell Street
- ◆ Population decline
 - The Black Death
- ◆ Ashwell became isolated, its market in decline
 - There was still wealth in sheep farming
 - And barley would become important in London markets after 1600...
